

a plurality of upwardly extending members operatively attached to said frame, each of said members being spaced a pre-determined distance from each adjacent member; and, a slot disposed in the top of each member for receiving the flange on each side of a seed meter whereby one seed meter can be stored between each adjacent member.